

Public evening lecture

On Thinking God: A Conversation with Menachem Lorberbaum

Catholic Academy of Berlin

April 27, 6 pm

Prof. Menachem Lorberbaum (Tel Aviv University)

Tottering Democracies and the Precariousness of Religious Commitment

Comments:

Prof. Dr. Monika Wohlrab-Sahr (Leipzig)

Chair:

Prof. Nitzan Lebovic (Lehigh University)

Youtube Livestream

We find our republics undergoing tectonic quakes rendering the very fabric of our civil societies. Social life is premised upon a basic trust and the exploitation of political divides leading to parliamentary paralysis has spread beyond those republics like the US and Israel in which indicted persons have cultivated the politics of resentment. In terms of our conference it is particularly disturbing to see the role played by prima facie religiously communities in promoting racist agendas.

intellectualdiaspora.org

”

Image from the Book "Politics and the Limits of Halacha" - Cover designed by Jacques Levy.

The rift between religious seriousness and moral commitment is shaping a new generation and it demands the reflection of morally committed theologians. Theology critiques idolatrous claims to power, it proposes vision, but these are premised on the capacity to understand religious pathologies.

Venue:
Katholische Akademie Berlin
Hannoversche Straße 5, 10115 Berlin
Katholische-Akademie-Berlin.de

KATHOLISCHE AKADEMIE
IN BERLIN e.V.